LIVING NATIVITY SCENE —
TRULY A COMMUNITY
PROJECT, TO BE HELD DEC. 18

Mrs. Irma Thompson was elected chairman for Bethel's Living Nativity Scene, to be presented again this year on the Bethel Common on Dec. 18. Initial plans were made at a well-attended planning committee meeting held Monday evening at the home of Mrs. Emily Saunders.

Several committee people have already volunteered their services and are in positions in this united effort. There are several costumers, make-up artists, bell ringers, shepherds, a property manager, an over-all lighting manager, a publicity manager, and the Town Manager's promise of help with snow removal. The guiding stars will be in place; the kindly animals will be there too, and some angels. This is all in preparation for the Scene.

Everyone interested in committee work, or desiring to be in the cast, should call Mrs. Thompson, preferably on a Monday, Tuesday or Wednesday morning. The cast is still being assembled and more help is needed in the costuming and make-up department.

The stable and manger used last year is apparently in storage. Anyone knowing of their location is asked to notify Mrs. Thompson.

PLANS PROGRESSING WELL
FOR LIVING NATIVITY
SCENE ON DEC. 18

Mrs. Irma Thompson, chairman of Bethel's third annual Living Nativity Scene scheduled for Dec. 18, held a very successful meeting with the costuming and make-up committees Monday evening. All details in these areas were finalized.

A dress rehearsal has been scheduled for Saturday afternoon, Dec. 17, at the Fire Station. The costuming committee has requested that the shepherd boys bring a clean sheet to be used as a basis on which to build their costumes. The sheet may be white or color tinted. The boys should plan to wear long-sleeved solid color shirts or sweaters, and should wear warm but not bulky clothing.

All remaining plans for the pageant are going smoothly. The fine community response and enthusiasm is heart-warming. It indicates that this annual event is truly a community project.

Living Nativity Scene to Be Presented at Bethel

BETHEL — Final preparations for the living nativity scene at the Common, Sunday evening, were scheduled by participants and the committee last Sunday. A change in performance times has been made as follows: 4:30, 5:30 and 6:30 p.m.

Bethel Girl Scout Cadettes, directed by Mrs. Rodney Brooks and Mrs. Hope Tibbets, will serve hot chocolate and coffee to members of the cast between pageant showings.

Mr. and Mrs. James Fiske have invited members of the cast and their families for supper at the New Yorker after the pageant.

A 30 minute tape of Christmas music telling the Christmas Story, while the cast is acting it out, will contain a running commentary done by Robert Kenniston.

James Davis, Warren Tibbets, Allen Walker, Randy Chretien, Roger Dock, Jack Brooks, David Thurston, Larry Jacobs, Charles Jacobs, Allen Burgess, Richard Waldron, William Eames, Lindy Chayer and Douglas Farrar.

After the live nativity scene is over, Mrs. George Taylor, assisted by her son, Bruce, will place her life-sized painted nativity figures in the stable for the remainder of the Christmas season.

Others assisting in this special event are: Bell ringers, who will ring the church bells ten minute before the hour, Mike Tibbets, Mike Chretien, Lincoln Fiske Jr., Seth Timberlake, Peter Kailey and Steve Hastings.

Roderick McMillan is responsible for clearing the common and traffic. Sound will be directed by Charles Farrar. Fencing by Richard Carter, Phil Chapman, Bruce Bailey and Norman Dock. Animals have been loaned by Warren Hastings, Stanley Moore, Claire Batchelder and Eileen Saunders. Make-up, Mrs. David Thompson; costumes, Mrs. Roland Glines, Mrs. John Frankevitz, Mrs. Richard Littlefield, Mrs. Lincoln Fiske, Mrs. Charles D. Merrill, Mrs. James Fiske; decorations, Eileen Saunders and Rebecca Andrews; and props, Mrs. Donald Brown and Eileen Saunders. Make-Mrs. Robert Kenniston.

BETHEL — Townspeople of on all roads leading into Bethel. Bethel will present their third annual outdoor Living Nativity Scene, Dec. 18. Three portrayals will be enacted on the Bethel Common at 4:30, 5:30 and 6:30 p.m. Church bells will chime 10 minutes before each presentation to alert townspeople and guests; and Christmas hymns will sound through the town as crowds gather at the manger.

Visitors from all surrounding areas are invited to follow the "guiding stars" to the manger. These stars have been placed of on all roads leading into Bethel. The 30 minute pageant scene is presented in pantomime. The beautiful Christmas story is reverently told in a background commentary, interluded with appropriate Christmas hymns. The nativity area on the Common will be aglow with lights. Participants, artistically costumed, will give an inspiring presentation.

After the pageant scenes are over, Mrs. George Taylor will place her life-sized hand painted nativity figures in the stable for the remainder of the Christmas season.

BETHEL — A live Nativity Scene will be enacted on the Bethel Common during the evening of Dec. 20th. Along with the scene the choirs of each church in town will present a short interlude of Christmas music.

Persons and groups assisting in this project, which was originated by Mrs. Sue Farrar, are costume committee headed by Mrs. Roland Glines; Boy Scouts, under the direction of leader Ernest Perkins and Stanley Davis, making the stable and manger; CPS children preparing stars, under the leadership of Miss Helen Varner and Principal Ryder; Blake MacKay and Fred McMillin, lighting; Paul Pierce, special lighting; Mrs. Rosabelle Tiffet, publicity.

"LIVING NATIVITY SCENE"
PLANS COMPLETED

Bethel townspeople will present their third annual outdoor "Living Nativity Scene" on Sunday, Dec. 18. The pageant will be presented on the Bethel Common at 4:30 p. m., 5:30 p. m., and 6:30 p. m.

Visitors from surrounding areas are invited to follow the "guiding stars" to the manger. These stars, made and mapped out by Crescent Park School children, will be placed on all roads leading into Bethel. This heart-warming community project enhances lives of all who share in this experience.

The sharing of plans and anticipation started before Thanksgiving. From the beginning all committee workers maintained an attitude of solemnity, enthused and determined to keep this third pageant scene at the high level of acceptance as it has been in the past. Plans are completed and the final rehearsal scheduled for Saturday, Dec 17, at 4:00 p. m. on the Common.

Committees include: Mrs. David Thompson, general chairman; Mrs. Charles Farrar, director; Mrs. Donald Brown, property; and Mrs. Robert Tifft, publicity.

Guiding stars: Frederick Raynes, principal of Crescent Park School, with Miss Helen Varner and her sixth grade students; Costumes: Mrs. Lincoln Fiske, chairman, Mrs. Alvin Barth, Mrs. Roger Favreau, Mrs. Warren Hastings, Mrs. Edmond Vachon, Mrs. Austin Conover, Mrs. Emma Howe, Mrs. Roland Glines, Mrs. Wilbur Myers, Mrs. Dana Brooks, Mrs. Murray Thurston and Mrs. Norris Brown.

Bethel's Living Nativity marks 14th anniversary

By John G. Ferland

BETHEL — The Bethel Living Nativity is in the midst of adolescence as it celebrates its 14th birthday this season. But counting years does not mean the Christmas pageant will someday die of old age.

Quite the contrary. Unlike many aspects of life since 1964, the Nativity has hardly changed its character. Although the Nativity chairman, Merton Brown, spends an enormous amount of time planning, coordinating and — yes — worrying, the Nativity has remained a relatively simple way to celebrate the birth of Christ.

"The Nativity scene is quite moving," says Susan Farrar, director and creator of the Nativity. "The townspeople share in doing it, which is what Christmas is all about. It's the citizens' Christmas gift to each other."

About 150 Bethel people are usually involved in the Nativity, Brown estimates. This year's pageant is scheduled for Sunday, Dec. 19, at 4:30 p.m. and 5 p.m. on the Bethel Common.

Brown and Mrs. Farrar expect about 1,500 spectators to witness the two 20-minute performances featuring Christmas hymns and a living portrayal of the stable scene that marked Christ's birth.

Mrs. Farrar initiated the first living Nativity after she and her husband, Charles, returned to New England following 12 years in Phoenix, Ariz. Phoenix had a limited version of a living Nativity with only the shepherds played by people, she explains.

She realized how much impact a totally live Nativity scene would have, and tucked the idea in the back of her mind. Then Mrs. Farrar spent some time working with Jesuit missionaries from Pennsylvania. The missionaries felt that people should use their talents to glorify God, she recalls.

So Mrs. Farrar, who directs Bethel's

Children's Dance Theater, decided to put her theatre talents to work and asked for volunteers for the Nativity project.

"The biggest factor in getting the Nativity off the ground was determination," she explains. "Many people felt it couldn't be done, especially since people would have to stand out in the cold."

At first, some families were reluctant to let their infants play the baby Jesus in the biting December air. Mr. and Mrs. A. James Fiske were enthusiastic, though, and their then-baby girl, Carrie, became the first Bethel baby Jesus. This year, at age 14, Carrie will be a shepherd.

Community enthusiasm, rather than financial support, has supported the Nativity ever since. Everything involved is volunteer — from making costumes from old drapes, and building the stable and manger to letting animals roam the manger scene for authenticity.

There is no formal Nativity committee — just people who work for the chairman when asked to. Several people have had turns serving as chairman or co-chairmen. Mrs. Farrar handled the details for the first three years. She was followed by Doug and Sue Bane, Irma Thompson, Dave and Norma Salway, Ginger Kelly, Suzanne (Kneeland) Grover, Al and Jane Barth and Merton Brown, who has been chairman for four years.

Many groups contribute their time annually to the Nativity:

(1) Each church in town selects six shepherds, which include family groups whenever possible.

(2) Boy Scouts build the stable and Girl Scouts serve hot refreshments to participants between shows.

(3) Local people donate their animals. In the past, animals have included sheep, goats, calves, burros, oxen and horses.

"The animals are the hardest part of the preparations," Brown admits. "They have to be transported before and after the pageant, and kept calm throughout it. The person who serves as gatekeeper has to be knowledgeable about animals."

One year some animals got stage fright and jumped the fence surrounding the stable when the music started, Brown recalls with a chuckle. Another time, a horse stepped on a shepherd's costume train and almost ripped the costume off.

(5) Elementary school children make large, cardboard stars which are placed at the sides of the highways that enter Bethel to lead motorists to the Common.

(6) Carole Fiske directs a 20-voice chorus.

Some of the pageant participants are hand-picked by Mrs. Farrar and the chairman, including:

(1) The Holy Family — usually a couple who have a baby about three months old.

(2) Angels — three girls who are six or seven years old.

(3) Wisemen — usually three of Bethel's tallest men.

Although many Bethel citizens have participated in the Nativity several times, the roles are changed each year so everyone can become involved, explains Brown.

Through the years the Nativity has managed to conquer its growing pains. Once, someone suggested that the Nativity be moved to the athletic field behind the Gould Academy Field House so passers-by on U.S. Route 2 could see the scene.

That location would have taken away from the Nativity's intimacy, Mrs. Farrar replies.

The Nativity has not changed that much through the years and we don't want it to," she stresses. "I like the closeness of the Common where children can get near the Holy Family and the shepherds, and touch them if they want."

THIRD ANNUAL 'LIVING NATIVITY SCENE' TO BE PRESENTED SUNDAY ON COMMON

Bethel townspeople will present their third annual outdoor "Living Nativity Scene" on the Sunday before Christmas, December 18. This pageant will be presented on the Bethel Common at 4:30 p. m., 5:00 p. m., and 5:30 p. m.

Church bells will chime ten minutes before each portrayal to alert the townspeople and visitors to follow the "guiding stars" to the manger. These stars, made and mapped out by school children, have been placed on all roads leading into Bethel.

This pageant is presented in pantomime. This Christmas story is told with a new background commentary done by David Thompson interluded with Christmas hymns. The scene is beautifully lighted, and participants give an inspiring performance.

The "Living Nativity Scene" is an outstanding gift to the Christian season by Bethel people. Visitors from all surrounding areas are invited to attend and share in this heart-warming experience.

John Coolidge of East Bethel has provided oxen for use in this year's pageant. A "black" lamb will be provided through the courtesy of Gerald Harrington of Sunday River.

Participating in the pageant scene will be: Merton Brown, Thomas Davis, Daniel Favreau, Andy Davis, William Eames, Richard Waldron, Seth Timberlake, Lincoln Fiske, Jr., Robert Tifft, Jr., Daniel Vogt, Claire Bachelder, Douglas Farrar, Mark Walker, James Perkins, Lloyd Sweetser, David Keniston, Dean Murphy, Roger Jackson, George Nickerson, Larry Robinson, William Robertson, David Thurston, Dana Brooks, Norris Brown, Jeanine Merrill, Theresa Hebert, Marilyn Hebert, Margaret Cousins, William Cousins, and Charles Cousins.

Bell ringers include: Stephen Richardson, Peter Thurston, Pedar Weise, Ronald Jackson, Chris Murphy and James Thurston. Additional bell ringers may be named from the Methodist Church.

MANY VIEW 3rd ANNUAL
"LIVING NATIVITY SCENE"

The community of Bethel once again presented their memorable Living Nativity Scene, Sunday, on the Common. Three continuous portrayals started at 4:30 p.m. Church bells chiming before each scene found crowds from Bethel and all surrounding towns gathering at the Manger. The story of this pageant has spread and become an anticipated event. The scene was filmed for WCSH this year and shown on Monday evening.

When the background commentary of the Christmas story started, the crowds became still. Lighting effects seemed to make the entire scene glow iridescently! Participants solemnly presented an artistic performance in pantomime.

Three little angels added a peaceful effect to this year's scene as they beckoned the shepherds up a lighted pathway to the manger and then hovered over the scene. Shepherds arrived in groups. One shepherdess came with her black sheep, another on her horse. An appealing little shepherd boy was led on a burro and promptly placed his blanket on the Infant's feet. The three wisemen arrived in elegance and humbly offered their gifts.

The over-all effect of this scene was inspiring to observers. Said one misty-eyed viewer. "That's Christmas"! And another young boy expressed a desire to be a part of this pageant one day. Everyone who shared in this experience was greatly impressed and more aware of the real meaning and depth of Christmas. And this includes the townspeople of Bethel who have observed through the past three years in this project, that the Christmas spirit is truly felt and lived when people think about its true meaning and share it with others. Bethel people's fine contribution to the Christmas season is their gift to each other.

To the Editor:

Thank you for the coverage you gave to the Christmas Pageant. The Living Nativity Scene pointed the way to a happy Christmas.

Your readers will be to hear of the harmonious community effort and to the response to the call of Christmas-time. Every committee worked earnestly and found cooperation on all sides even as far away as East Waterford and Norway.

The General chairman wishes to broadcast through your paper her appreciation of and gratitude for the unselfed work of all who contributed to that reverent and joyous expression of Christmas love.

Sincerely yours,
Irma Thompson,
General Chairman

PLANNING BETHEL NATIVITY SCENE — Townspeople of Bethel are making plans for their eighth Living Nativity Scene. This 30-minute pageant will be presented on the outdoor Bethel Common Sunday, Dec. 19, at 5 p.m. and 6 p.m. Principals in planning efforts are above, from left, Burnie Morrill, co-chairman; Mrs. Ranald Stevens, chairman; and Mrs. Charles Farrar, director.

A timeless tradition: the living nativity

by David Solomon

BETHEL — The crowd of spectators had gathered quietly around the simple but well-constructed manger, waiting patiently as a dusting of snowflakes and Christmas carols filled the air with a sense of magic and reverence.

Then, the procession began, as the citizens of Bethel staged their 15th annual reenactment of the birth of Christ, complete with more than 40 costumed adults, children, live animals, a host of angels, and a full choir accompanied by a small ensemble.

With the narrator reading the appropriate chapter and verse from the Bible, the crowd was carried back in time, to the village of Bethlehem, and an event that changed the course of western civilization.

When Bethel dance instructor Sue Farrar, now retired, founded the Bethel Living Nativity 15 years ago, she established a tradition that has lived on. While the event has gained some recognition, it remains fundamentally an expression of faith and community spirit among the people of Bethel.

The prospects are likely that the Living Nativity will retain its local flavor, because Sue Farrar, in a letter handed over to her successor, outlined six basic principles which have guided the project for the past eight years.

Foremost among those principles, read each year to the pageant committee, is Farrar's conviction that "The Bethel Living Nativity shall never become commercialized for personal gain, in any way, shape, or manner."

Her letter asks that no promotion of goods, no sale of coffee or hot dogs, or any commercial affiliation be allowed to mar the pageant. "The true essence of Christmas must be observed," she wrote.

The founder of the pageant was equally firm in her belief that the event should always take place on the Bethel Common, and never moved to a larger site:

"It is the very close intimacy that is so precious, that must be observed. For the children to be able to reach out and touch the animals, and see the Holy Family close up is the beauty of this pageant. We can all see extravaganzas on T.V., movies, or at Radio City Music Hall. This is our little pageant, and that's what makes it so special."

Farrar herself produced the pageant for its first eight years, but seven years ago turned the reins over to another director. A new coordinator-director has taken over each year since.

This year's coordinator and chorus director, Lyn Bristol, appeared tired, but bubbling with enthusiasm, as the characters suited up for the procession in the rehearsal room of the Moses Mason House museum last Sunday evening.

"It's almost an impromptu thing," she smiled, "except for a few people who take it a little seriously."

The extent of community involvement is widespread. In addition to the 40 characters (including shepherds, angels, chorus, and wise men) more than 100 other residents are involved in some aspect of the pageant, Bristol said.

And at least 80 per cent of those are adults, in keeping with another of Sue Farrar's re-
